He explained that as an employer or to be employable, individuals will need to entrust empower each other to learn from mistakes and affirm what is right. Enable and guide each other towards successful goals. Not to judge but to encourage growth. The most important is to treat others as how you would like others to treat you. Always think of your limitations and find ways to improve. Do things honestly as you reap what you sow. The Golden Rule is the principle of treating others as one would wish to be treated.

Time management is a must besides self-reflection and appraisal. It is always good to look for the right mentors to build up relationship and to do networking.
